THE TRANSITION ADVISOR

George C. Taylor School of Law

Volume 1, No.2

Annex Faculty to Dunford

Faculty members from the annex and the west half of the clinic will relocate to Dunford Hall in early August. Dunford Hall is located in the Eastern time zone; however, don't forget to dial "1" before each faculty member's phone number. Fax machines will be installed in each faculty member's office in September, so that they may communicate with their students.

Parking Update

In an effort to solve the ongoing parking shortage, the University administration has announced that all ground-level parking lots will be replaced by multi-level garages. Construction will begin on all garages this September. During the temporary construction period (1994-96), no parking will be available on campus for faculty and staff. Shuttle bus service will be provided from the UT-Chattanooga campus.

Ramsey's Menu

Ramsey's cafeteria is pleased to announce its transition menu, so that we'll have some extra meat on our bones for those long walks to class! New entrees include stir-fried lard, Homer Simpson fried chicken (with extra skin), and, for the vegetarians on the faculty, fried salad. Lard – the other white meat. Be sure to try Ramsey's newest snack offering, buttered popcorn.

Excavation Update

Dean Hoover continues to deny that Native American remains have been found beneath the law school parking lot. "Those are limestone caverns down there. Any bodies would have washed away decades ago, just as they did under Thompson-Boling arena." Dean Hoover does confirm that a small piece of canvas, identified as part of the top of a Jaguar convertible, has been found next to the now-vacant International House building.

Admissions Update

After observing sewer construction on the front lawn during last week's open house, all 153 members of the new first-year class have withdrawn their acceptances and decided not to attend law school. To fill in the gap, all second-year students will repeat the first-year curriculum.

Natural Turf

In light of the success of the new natural turf at the football stadium, the Building Committee has decided to use natural turf in classrooms A, C and D and the Clinic Moot Court room. The faculty will be asked to take turns cutting the grass, weed-eating, and watering.

Revised New Name for University

After receiving complaints from Knoxville College about the likelihood of confusion, Chancellor Snyder has decided not to rename UT as the University of Knoxville. Three alternative names are now under consideration; please call the Chancellor's office to indicate your preference. The three names are: University of Fort Sanders, University of Cumberland Avenue, and University of the Strip. Go little orange!

Law Faculty Contributions

The Dean is pleased to announce that faculty contributions to the College of Law capital campaign have topped the $250,000 mark. The funds, which have been invested by the University, are presently earning $1,500 per year. The University's investment advisor is still bullish on the Valhalla Village investment.
