INSTITUTE PRESENTED ON ESTATE PLANNING

The Twenty-third Annual Law Institute of the University of Tennessee College of Law and the Knoxville Bar Association was enthusiastically received by an audience of more than two hundred judges, lawyers, bankers, accountants and representatives of insurance companies.

Discussions by nationally known authorities centered on current problems in lifetime and testamentary estate planning.

The preliminary aspects of estate planning such as determining the assets and objectives of the client and also a discussion of the marital deduction were presented by Henry Cassorte Smith, tax partner in a well-known New York law firm. The use of trusts in estate planning and the administration of estates were discussed by Eustace W. Tomlinson, Personal Trust Officer and Counsel to the Personal Trust Department of the Chemical Bank New York Trust Company. The role of insurance in estate planning was presented by Robert J. Lawthers, Director of Estate Planning Services of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company.

The proceedings of Morning and Afternoon Sessions of this noteworthy Institute are being transcribed and will appear in the Winter Issue of the Tennessee Law Review.

Programs Planned for Continuing Legal Education

The Tennessee Bar Association has been actively interested in sponsoring a realistic program of continuing legal education for its members as suggested by the American Bar Association. Erby L. Jenkins, while President of the Tennessee Bar Association, set the wheels in motion, but like the mills of the gods, they turn very slowly.

The Institutes held each year at The U-T College of Law and Vanderbilt School of Law, and co-sponsored by the local bar associations, should be continued as an important part of any program of continuing legal education. Since it is difficult, however, for lawyers living at distant parts of the State to take days away from their offices on several occasions annually to attend these Institutes, it appears that short courses, seminars, symposiums, or institutes should be given from time to time in several geographic areas throughout the State.

President Alf Taylor and the Executive Committee of the Tennessee Bar Association have therefore requested the Junior Bar Association, headed by President Sam F. Fowler, Jr., and President-Elect John J. Thomason, to work with U-T College of Law in selecting, planning and presenting at least one short experimental course for lawyers in four or five areas within the State in 1963.

Currently two programs are being initiated:

1. A demonstration of pre-trial procedure in the United States District Court, Eastern Division. Many lawyers do not feel at ease in dealing with the federal rules of procedure, especially those applying to the pre-trial of cases. An actual case will be used in the pre-trial demonstration. Each participating judge will make comments on the procedure at the close of the case. At least two of these demonstrations may be held during January, one in Knoxville and one in Chattanooga.

2. A six or eight hour course on a medical legal subject such as "Low Back Injuries." The topic for such a course is now under consideration and a decision will be made soon. The experimental programs may be presented in Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville and the Tri-Cities area during the period from January 1963 to June 1963. Every effort will be made to meet the desires of the local bar as to the date and hours of presentation. There will be some expenses connected with these programs so it is planned to charge a reasonable registration fee.

Appellate Competition

Thomas Torbett, Wendal Jackson, and Steve Worsham represented the U-T College of Law at the Regional Moot Court Competition held in Atlanta. The topic for arguments was the "Constitutional Right to Counsel in a State Non-Capital Felony Prosecution."

Tennessee, the defending champions from last year, lost in the semi-final round to Stetson, having defeated both Emory and Mercer earlier. Stetson was defeated by Miami in the finals. These schools will attend the National Competition in New York in December.

Pre-Legal Society Meets

The Pre-Legal Society at U-T held its first meeting of the year on October 18. Everyone was interested in a proposal to form a jury panel composed of pre-law students to serve during the moot court trials held each week in the Law School.

Interest was evident also in continuing the legal career programs which were presented during the past year.

The Society offered to make more information about the Law School available to undergraduates and proposed establishing a closer relationship between the advisors and members of the Law Faculty.

PAD Hosts Conclave

McReynolds Chapter, Phi Alpha Delta, will host the District V Conclave in Knoxville this spring. Delegates are expected from the University of Alabama, Cumberland Law School at Howard, the University of Mississippi, Tulane and Vanderbilt.

Tentative plans call for the official program to begin on Friday, April 5, with an informal reception for the visiting delegates. The main program on April 6 will feature an address by a prominent member of the profession and a panel discussion of a current legal problem.

Several nationally prominent PAD alumni, including former Supreme Justice Di Grazia, are expected to attend. This promises to be one of the finest Conclaves for District V in recent times, so all alumni should plan to attend.

PDP Accomplishments

The Phi Delta Phi chapter at the Law College, Roosevelt Inn, has continued to play an important part in extracurricular and academic activities, sponsoring weekly luncheons with speakers from the local bar and occasional social functions.

All four of the Student Bar Association officers for the Summer and Fall Quarters of 1962 were members of Roosevelt Inn. President Earl Layman headed the executive committee, assisted by Vice-President John O'Connor, Secretary Bob Harriss and Treasurer Ben Hooper.

Three PDPs, Steve Worsham, Wendal Jackson, and Tom Torbett, composed U-T's National Moot Court team, which recently represented the College of Law in regional competition in Atlanta. One of U-T's representatives to the ALSA, Dennis Jarvis, is a member of Roosevelt Inn.

SBA Elects Officers

Elections for Student Bar Association officers were held at the U-T College of Law on November 20.

Jerry Taylor of Memphis won the Presidency over Charles Susano of Knoxville. James Omer of Dresden won the Vice-President's seat, defeating Max Wilson of Mountain City. Gus Wood of Chattanooga defeated Jim Clayton of Knoxville for Secretary. David Buck from Chattanooga was elected Treasurer over Dick Ladd from Norris.

A resolution was overwhelmingly passed to change the SBA Constitution by enlarging the Executive Council to include presidents of both legal fraternities and an independent member-at-large.
