A Message from the Dean . . .

Enrollments in law schools continue to rise and this trend is reflected in the College of Law. In the fall of 1964, we had a total enrollment of 343 students. In the fall of 1965, we have a total of 381 students. In the four quarters beginning with the Fall Quarter, 1964, and ending with the Summer Quarter of 1965 we had a total of 243 entering students. During the same period we graduated 85 students. The number of applications for the Winter Quarter 1966 is in excess of the number received last year.

HAROLD C. WARNER

The physical facilities of the College of Law are still adequate for an additional increase in enrollment. In August 1965 the Municipal Technical Advisory Service and the Bureau of Sociological Research moved to other quarters and this space was turned back to the College of Law. This move provides another class room and additional badly needed offices. It is now estimated that we can adequately handle an enrollment of 450 students.

The admission requirements for the Fall Quarter were increased. The results of this increase are being studied by a faculty committee. This study may lead to an additional increase in admission standards. The announcement has already been made that beginning with the Fall Quarter 1968 all entering students must have a degree. The date of 1968 was set so that the students who were already in College under the three-three program, under which the A.B. or B.S. degrees and the LL.B. can be earned in six years, three years in pre-law and three years of law. When the degree requirement goes into effect the 3-3 program will be terminated. At present, two-thirds of our entering students already have a degree.

On September 1, 1965, two new assistant professors, namely, Durward S. Jones and Joseph G. Cook joined the faculty. Professor Jones is a graduate of the University of North Carolina. He resigned from his position on the Staff of the Institute of Government, University of North Carolina, in 1958, and since then he has been in the practice of law in Greensboro, North Carolina. Professor Cook is a graduate of the University of Alabama. In June of 1965, he received his LL.M. from Yale Law School.

Assistant Professor Wheeler A. Rosenbalm, resigned his position as a full-time professor effective September 1, 1965, in order to enter the practice of law. He is now associated with the firm of Frantz, McConnell and Seymour, Knoxville. However, he will teach part-time during the year 1965-1966.

We now have 12 full-time and 11 part-time faculty members. Included in the latter group are two legal clinic assistants, and Circuit Judges James M. Haynes, Chester R. Mahood and T. Edward Cole who preside over our Moot Court. The part-time faculty are practicing lawyers and judges and they teach in the particular fields in which they are specialists.

The curriculum has been enriched by several new courses that are being offered this year for the first time. In the present quarter, Professor Noel is holding a seminar on Products Liability. Professor Weckstein is holding a seminar on Arbitration. In the Winter Quarter, Professor Rayson will hold a seminar on Labor Law. In the Spring Quarter, a course on Social Legislation will be offered for the first time. It is hoped that arrangements can be made so that a new course "Accounting For Lawyers" can be offered in the Spring Quarter. A faculty committee is constantly studying the curriculum with a view to strengthening it.

This issue of the U-T Lawyer is the placement issue and contains the names, pictures and a biographical resume of all the students scheduled to graduate in December 1965, March, June, and August, 1966.

A few years ago the accepted procedure for a newly graduated lawyer to obtain a job was to knock on doors and write letters. The majority of prospective employers came to rely on this procedure while the others contacted the law schools. The low law enrollments between 1948-1958 resulted in fewer graduates. At the same time the expanding economy and population brought an increase in the need for lawyers. These factors sharply reduced the number of door knockers, and attorneys and law firms were led by necessity to contact the law schools for young lawyers. At the same time schools were establishing placement services or placing new emphasis on existing services.

Each year an increasing number of attorneys and employers are holding interviews at the College of Law. Anyone desiring to use this service is requested to write to me or to the Law College Placement Office. We will be happy to have the opportunity to serve you.

Phi Delta Phi Predicts Big Year

Roosevelt Inn Chapter of Phi Delta Phi has embarked upon what may prove to be the fraternity's most properous and fruitful year at the Law College. Under the capable leadership of President David Burkhart, the school's largest legal fraternity continues to grow in scholarship, athletic activities, and social affairs. It is the intention of the fraternity to once again offer a school year with a variety of functions scheduled in each of these areas.

David Burkhart represented the fraternity at the fraternity's Annual National Convention in Quebec this past September.

New initiates for the Fall Quarter are Tom O'Neal, Landon Goins, Tom Keeling, George A. Lowe, Jim Butler, Danny Anderton, Bill Cannon, Tom Looney, and Bill Gregory.

Phi Alpha Delta's Speakers Program, under the chairmanship of Sandy McPherson, has continued to provide the students with the opportunity to hear top speakers in the field of law as well as political personalities.

The fraternity has grown financially as well as socially and physically under the astute guidance of Charles Fraley, its Treasurer.

A combination rush party and dance was held at the Town Lodge under the chairmanship of Art Stowers. If attendance is any indication, this was a successful function.

President Holt Looks At Lawyers

"Lawyers more than any other group of people need a wide breadth of knowledge," Dr. Andrew D. Holt told students of the College of Law on November 10. Speaking at a meeting of the Student Bar Association in the Moot Court Room, the President of the University of Tennessee presented comments about the legal profession under the topic of "What I Expect of My Lawyer."

Dr. Holt stressed personal appearance, stating "I want my lawyer to look like a lawyer." He remarked that an attorney who takes a reasonable pride in his appearance will receive respect from his associates and the public.

Going on to say that thorough knowledge of the law and its applications is a necessity, Dr. Holt said "I expect my lawyer to know his business from A to Z." Though mastering the materials studied in law school is needed, keeping abreast of developments in the law through subscription to legal periodicals and attendance at law institutes and bar conventions is likewise essential for the knowledgeable attorney, Dr. Holt continued.

Having a broad base of information from a variety of fields of learning is perhaps a lawyer's most useful asset, Dr. Holt remarked. He wants his advocate to possess this aggregate of ". . . little bits of information about a number of specialized subjects," the President continued.

By far the most necessary of the qualifications his lawyer must possess is a sound, fundamental character, Dr. Holt stated. "I am going to be absolutely honest with my attorney—telling him the whole story—and I want him to be honest with me," he said. A reputation for honesty helps the attorney in his practice, for the lawyer must have the respect of the people for whom and with whom he works, the President elaborated.

Dr. Holt further stated that his attorney should be reasonably temperate to protect his personal and professional life. Because of the lives of tension they lead, ". . . lawyers have more temptations for intemperance than any group I know," he stated. Dr. Holt said that his lawyer should maintain a faith in God, for ". . . any man who hasn't got this is pretty hard up."

In conclusion, the President urged the law students to ask God each day to "keep their motives straight," so that they might maintain high standards of personal and professional integrity.

A.L.S.A. Vice-President Visits Law School

Jude T. Aubrey, Sixth Circuit National Vice-President of the American Law School Association, visited the College of Law in early October.

An informal session was held with Dean Warner and the Student Bar Executive Committee, discussing the various advantages and programs which the A.L.S.A. offers. It was indicated that the reason that the College of Law has been unable to have a representative attend the annual A.L.S.A. convention in the past is due to the fact that the convention, which is held in conjunction with the American Bar Association meeting each Summer, is generally held during the U-T examination period. It is thought, however, that the Student Bar will be able to send a representative to the forthcoming Circuit conference which will be held in Toledo sometime in March.

Governor Clement Addresses Law Students

Building a meaningful career as a lawyer involves more than simply choosing between good and evil, Governor Frank G. Clement, Jr. told students and faculty members of the College of Law in a special meeting sponsored by the Student Bar Association on November 5.

Speaking to a standing-room-only crowd in the Moot Court Room, Tennessee's chief executive stated that a truly successful attorney must be committed to the concept of service through his profession, rather than to the end of material success alone. "The desire for security comes into life as a guest, remains as a host, and winds up as iron master," Clement said.

The Governor, a former special agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, deplored the rising crime rate in the United States and those persons ". . . who say that if you don't agree with the law you may disregard it through civil disobedience." The legal profession now possesses ". . . a blinding shortage of young lawyers anxious to engage in the practice of criminal law," Clement stated. "The law profession is not the place to learn how to make a million dollars," he continued, "but is rather a place to learn to think."

Governor Clement spoke of his own love for the practice of law, stating that his only regret in being in public life is that he can no longer work in his chosen profession. He concluded with a challenge for the law students to consider service as their primary goal, with hope of material success. "If you want to live your life 'where the action is,' I bid you welcome to a profession that desperately needs you . . . and I envy you," Clement said.

After the meeting, members of the audience greeted the Governor at a reception held in his honor in the law students' lounge.

Alabama Attorney-General Speaks

Alabama's attorney-general, Richmond Flowers, Sr., told members and guests of Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity on November 8 that unless the citizens of Alabama take steps to insure impartial justice in the state's courts, federal legislation may be enacted to control the state's jury system.

Stating that he sees hope for citizens of his state solving their own problems, Flowers continued, "The South's greatest need at this moment is the tough-minded man or woman who is capable of making rational judgments involving choices that may be both unpalatable and unpopular but which nevertheless must be made if we are to emerge from the economic and political shadows."

Speaking of the United States Supreme Court, Flowers said "It is our right to disagree with their collective wisdom in individual matters but it is not any more our duty to inveigh and disparage than it is our duty to sublimely embrace the Court's every dicta." He stated that disagreements with the Court's rulings should be resolved in the courtroom rather than through willful disobedience of those decisions.

Flowers, a member of Phi Delta Phi and father of Tennessee's highly-rated freshman football player of the same name, ended his address with a plea to the law group to always respect the law whether agreeing with it or not. "This would be the greatest service you could render your country in this time of need," he said.

University Placement Services Available

Mr. Howard H. Lumsden, Director of the University Placement Office, discussed with the senior class at a mid-October meeting the opportunities available in law-related fields.

Mr. Lumsden indicated that a number of years ago the University of Tennessee Board of Trustees set forth the requirement that before a student could obtain a diploma from the University it would be necessary for him or her to establish a placement record in the Placement Office or to sign a waiver stating that he or she knew that such a service existed but that he did not wish to utilize this service. Information from this waiver was primarily used by the Alumni Office in establishing permanent records for each graduate of the University in the event the graduate did not establish a personnel record.

This year Mr. Lumsden has tried to meet with a number of law graduates to inform them not only of the University's requirement but also to acquaint them with the possible assistance they may obtain from the Placement Office.

Many organizations recruit on the campus for law graduates in capacities related to their legal education. Examples of some of these employers are government agencies, CPA firms, banks, trust companies, insurance companies and other financial organizations. There are times when manufacturing organizations also interview law graduates, especially if they have an engineering undergraduate degree and a law degree. There are occasional openings in labor relations with manufacturing organizations.

U-T Enters Moot Court Competition

William M. Leech, Jr., of Charlotte, Tennessee, William M. Sheffield, of Knoxville, and Arthur B. Stowers, Jr., of Harriman, accompanied by Dr. Forrest Lacey of the U-T College of Law faculty, represented the University of Tennessee College of Law at the Regionals of the National Moot Court Competition held in Atlanta on November 11th and 12th. The questions involved were conflicts of law and constitutionality.

Other schools participating were Alabama, Cumberland at Howard, Georgia, Mercer, Emory, Vanderbilt, Florida, Stetson, Miami, and Florida A.&M.

The U.T. team drew a bye in the first round and lost in the second round to the University of Georgia.

Student Bar Association Activities

As the term of the present administration of the Student Bar Association draws to a close, it must be commended for a number of notable accomplishments.

It was responsible for making available the back issues of the Tennessee Law Review to the members of the Student Bar Association. It also presented an excellent orientation program during the summer and fall quarters. In this the S.B.A. performed a very necessary service because of problems incident to the increased enrollment. The program was well planned by its chairman, Wilson Ritchie.

The personnel of this administration, which served from Spring Quarter through the Fall Quarter, 1965, is as follows: President, Bob Knolton; Vice-President, Ford Quillen; Secretary, Walt Bussart; and Treasurer, Bill Leech.

Jones Appointed To Law Faculty

Mr. Durward S. Jones began his teaching duties at the College of Law in September as an Assistant Professor. A native of North Carolina, Mr. Jones completed his undergraduate work at the University of North Carolina where his major area of study was economics. He received his A.B. degree in 1951.

Mr. Jones continued his studies at the University of North Carolina College of Law. While a student there he was a member of the staff of the North Carolina Law Review. He received his J.D. degree in 1954.

After receiving his degree, Mr. Jones took the position of Assistant Director of the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill, a branch of the University of North Carolina. The Institute is primarily engaged in research and legal writing. The Institute is unique in that it offers a course for public officials, teaching them the fundamentals of holding public office and the duties involved.

Mr. Jones left the Institute in 1958 to practice law in Greensboro, North Carolina. He remained there until accepting his appointment to the Law Faculty of the U-T College of Law. He is presently assigned to teaching Private Corporations and Introduction to Law.

Two New Seminars Offered

During the Fall Quarter, 1965, seminars will be offered for the first time in Products Liability and in Arbitration.

The Seminar in Products Liability is designed to prepare students to handle effectively litigation in this rapidly expanding field. Consideration is given to the responsibilities of manufacturers, retailers, and other suppliers. The various grounds of liability, such as negligence, warranty, and direct tort responsibility are fully developed. Attention also is given to the various defenses, such as contributory fault or unusual use of the product by the injured party. The various policy considerations in this new area of liability for injuries from defective products, which represents the most striking development of tort law in the present century, are fully explored.

Despite the general unfamiliarity of lawyers with arbitration, there is increasing and wide-spread inclusion of arbitration clauses in labor, insurance, building, and commercial contracts. To be more adequately equipped to serve his client, the lawyer should be acquainted with the process and law of arbitration. The arbitration seminar seeks to meet this need, and particularly explores to what extent agreements to arbitrate and awards of arbitrators are enforceable in Tennessee and elsewhere, and whether changes in the Tennessee law might be desirable. The study of the merits of arbitration—speed, economy, expertise, confidentiality, voluntariness, and informality—may not only serve to illuminate a desirable alternative to litigation, but may also serve as criteria by which to investigate possible reforms in the judicial process.

Scholarships

The U-T Annual Giving Program's first mailing will be made during December. It is hoped that alumni and friends of the College of Law will, in the appropriate place on the card or check, designate their gifts for the College of Law Scholarship Fund.
