Homeless Project Begins in the Fall

A grant from the U.S. Department of Education to establish a program to assist homeless persons will begin in the Fall at The University of Tennessee College of Law's Legal Clinic. Phylliss C. Wimberly will be the staff attorney and instructor and Pamela L. Wolf will be the social worker for The Homeless Persons Representation Project. The project will last for three years.

Ms. Wimberly received a B.S. and J.D. from The University of Alabama. She will leave a position with the Tuscaloosa law firm of England & Bivens, P.C. to head the homeless project here. Ms. Wolf is an M.S.W. advocate for the University of Tennessee's College of Social Work and an experienced community advocate. Her B.A. degree from UTK is in psychology.

"We are extremely fortunate to have attracted two people of Phyllis' and Pam's caliber," said Clinic Director Dean Rivkin "and we are very excited about the year ahead in the Clinic."

Turcott Award Established

Judy Turcott, a member of the Class of 1992, has established The Judith Turcott Special Service Moot Court Award at the College of Law. This award has been created to give the Moot Court Board a resource for demonstrating its appreciation for special service.

The awardee will be selected by the Board on the basis of their extraordinary effort to assist other Moot Court participants and to advance the value of the Moot Court Board's programs.

Judy was a member of the Moot Court program and received special recognition at the Moot Court Board's first banquet in April. She is serving a judicial clerkship with the Honorable Samuel H. Payne, Circuit Court Judge for the 11th Judicial District of Tennessee, in Chattanooga.

TAYLOR TRIVIA: Which faculty member was voted "Most Cheerful" in high school? Answer to last month's Taylor Trivia: Tony Greene, mailroom/duplication person, won the Knoxville Bridge Tournament Open Pairs on June 12-14 with Carol Mims. The "Let's Go For It" Section for Law Students

The Section of Business Law of the American Bar Association announces its annual Mendes Hershman Student Writing Contest on a business law subject of general and current interest. Cash prizes for the top three papers will be awarded as well as a trip to New Orleans for the first place winner. Deadline: October 30, 1992

Personnel Particulars

Extra congratulations to Joann Gillespie and George Rothery on their marriage July 25. Joann Rothery is the Director of Career Services.

Kudos to Jean Moore, Reference Librarian in the Law Library, for going above and beyond to assist a Media Law & Ethics class on a tour of the library. Dean and Professor Dwight Teeter of the College of Communications expressed his gratitude for Jean's assistance in a letter to Dean Wirtz.

Congratulations to CJ Thurston, Business Office, and Sandy Selvage, Computer Technician, for receiving a five-year service award from UT. Sandy and CJ have been with the College of Law the entire time.

Kenneth Wheatley has been an intern and co-researcher with Professor Gray this summer. Kenneth is a participant in the Ronald E. McNair Post-Baccalaureate Achievement Program at UT. He is a graduate of Mississippi State University in Political Science and will enter their graduate program in Public Administration this fall. Kenneth has been working on Professor Gray's computer program project which will help lawyers develop legal expert systems. He has been primarily testing the program to evaluate its utility for the users and posing problems to the system in mental health, mandatory outpatient treatment and domestic violence orders of protection situations.

Our condolences to Professor Carl Pierce on the death of his mother this month.

Environment and Natural Resources Group in the Office of the General Counsel of the Tennessee Valley Authority. He received his B.S. and J.D. from the University of Colorado and will teach Environmental Law & Policy in the Fall.

Adjunct Professor John A. Walker, Jr. is a partner in the Knoxville law firm of Walker & Walker. He received his A.B. from Duke and his J.D. from Columbia. Professor Walker has published articles in the Tennessee and Vanderbilt law reviews and will teach Banking Law in the Fall.

Adjunct Associate Professor Penny Jo White is a Circuit Court Judge in the 1st Judicial District of Tennessee. She earned a B.S. from East Tennessee State University, a J.D. from UT, and a LL.M. from Georgetown. Judge White will teach Pre-Trial Litigation in the Fall.

Professor Thomas D. Eisele accepted a position with the University of Cincinnati College of Law and by all accounts is ready to begin his new teaching assignment. Professor Eisele coordinated the Alumni Distinguished Lecture Series, the Miller Lecture, and the Jurist-in-Residence program at the College of Law. He authored many, many articles on jurisprudence and ethics and was a popular professor in the classroom. Professor Eisele received the Harold C. Warner Outstanding Teacher Award in 1988, the Harold C. Warner Faculty Award for Outstanding Scholarship in 1990, and the University of Tennessee National Alumni Association Outstanding Teacher Award in 1990. He will be missed. Good luck to Professor Eisele and his family on their move.

Professor James E. Thompson accepted an offer from the Air Force to pursue a graduate law degree followed by a tour of duty with special responsibilities in environmental law.

The UT Legal Clinic: A Retrospective from Practice by J.G. "Jack" Mitchell III

Participating in the Legal Clinic is unlike any other class you can take while in law school. It is your only opportunity to apply the knowledge you have acquired in law school with real life situations while maintaining a classroom atmosphere.

As students proceed through law school and clerk during the summer, attitudes and priorities begin to shift. Passing the bar and getting a job with a top firm drives many law students through their final two years of school. Taking every class which might be found on the bar exam is of utmost importance. In my opinion, however, they are missing out on a great opportunity and a powerful learning experience if they avoid taking a class in the Legal Clinic.

The Legal Clinic allows a student to actually practice law, either civil or criminal, without the risks associated with a private practice. This is because each student is carefully monitored by a member of the faculty who is the attorney of record for the cases upon which you work. You are able to counsel clients, take depositions, file complaints, and take part in court hearings while teachers coach and critique your work.

In addition, the Clinic's clientele is composed solely of indigents within Knox County and the services are provided free of cost to the client. Think of it, a chance to use your skills to the benefit of the community without even having a diploma, much less a license to practice. And while helping others, you help yourself.

I can assure you that you will get no greater satisfaction out of law school than you will in coming to the aid of someone who has nowhere else to turn. My first case in Criminal Clinic involved a man who had been in jail for almost two months because he was unable to pay his court costs in a public drunkenness case. It wasn't that he would not pay, he simply did not have the money. I researched the matter and filed a motion (under the watchful eye of Professor Anderson, of course) which was granted without a hearing. You cannot get from a Contracts or Evidence class the sense of satisfaction I felt when I took this man home to his wife and kids.

The clinic also provides invaluable experience to those who are long on knowledge and short on know-how. Not only do you learn how to prepare and work a case from its inception, but you will learn to find the courthouse and the clerks' offices without assistance. You would be amazed how difficult this is for some practicing attorneys. The faculty advisors provide insight on how to deal with court clerks and other attorneys, and the staff at the Clinic won't hesitate to show you how a law office runs and how to cut through the red tape to get things done both quickly and correctly.

To merely say that I am a fan of the Legal Clinic is insufficient. The things I learned there about the practice of law go beyond the textbooks. In my private practice I often take pro bono cases similar to those I had in Clinic. I do this not because I have to, but because of the satisfaction I get from being able to not only tell those who question a lawyer's intentions that I am not in this profession just for the money, but to show them.

Jack, a December '89 graduate, is in private practice in Murfreesboro.
