Dear Harold:

One of the nicest things that happened to me during my presidency was having you as my Dean of our College of Law. Not once during your administration did our College of Law present me a serious problem which could not be solved by mere means.

Without a bit of "mullablow," you were able to maintain an amazing spirit of cooperation among your faculty, students, personnel in our other colleges, the legal profession in Tennessee, and the world in general. You are passing on to your successor this fine spirit of cooperation, along with a new asset and a tradition of excellence in everything undertaken by our College of Law.

I am particularly grateful for your personal friendship, assistance, and tolerance. I propose to repay you by taking you to my favorite fishing holes.

Thanks for all you have done for me and my family. Please accept my sincerest thanks and best wishes for the future.

Sincerely yours,
 A. R. Holt

Colonel Harold C. Warner
 Dean, College of Law
 The University of Tennessee
 Knoxville, Tennessee

Dear Colonel:

The University's College of Law will not be the same after you retire from active duty next September--for the identical reason that it has not been the same since you became a member of its faculty some forty years ago.

No one in the history of the institution has had more influence upon the welfare and progress of his professional field than you have exerted upon the College of Law. Throughout the entire period of your service, you have earned the utmost respect and admiration from the thousands of young men and women who have studied in your classes and from your colleagues on the University faculty. You have been both an outstanding teacher and an inspiring leader, and we deeply appreciate the rich contribution that you have made to The University of Tennessee.

We know that you will continue to display a lively interest in the College of Law and in the University during the years ahead, and we shall welcome the privilege of seeing you and of hearing from you as often as you find it convenient to visit or write to us.

We extend our best wishes for health and happiness to you and Frances.

Sincerely yours,
 Edward J. Soling

Honorable Harold C. Warner
 Dean, College of Law
 The University of Tennessee
 Knoxville, Tennessee 37916

Dear Colonel Warner:

Your retirement as Dean of the College of Law gives me the excuse and opportunity to put in writing the thoughts which I have had for many years about your contribution to the College of Law and the influence you have had on me and the thousands of other law students who have graduated from the College of Law during your period of service. I had many good teachers in me and other law students as you best as a teacher who was interested in me and our finding our place in the legal world. You will recall that I have consulted with you about every important decision I have made with regard to my career as an attorney, and I am confident that most of your students have done the same.

I want you to know that the long hours you have spent over many years in your concern about the College of Law and its students have been appreciated, and I think the many fine attorneys who have graduated from the College of Law during the time you have been a teacher and the Dean, symbolize the result of your efforts.

I pray that you have happiness and success in whatever you do after your retirement. Any time I can be of service to you in any way, please give me the opportunity.

Yours very truly,
 Fred H. Cagle, Jr.

DEAN HAROLD C. WARNER

Faculty, students, and alumni soon say farewell to the symbol of the first great period in the history of The University of Tennessee College of Law. Dean Harold C. Warner, known by many as "Colonel", will be retiring at the end of the summer quarter 1971. He has played a significant role in the change of a modest professional school into one of the finest institutions of legal education in the South.

Dean Warner earned the Ph.B. and J.D. degrees from The University of Chicago in 1925, was admitted to the Illinois Bar and practiced there until 1928, at which time he joined the faculty of The University of Tennessee. At that time the school had but three full-time faculty members and a student body of about 40. It was housed in a small building on Church Street. In contrast, the present student body numbers over 500 in a new structure on Cumberland Avenue.

Military leave called Harold Warner away from the College of Law from June 1941 to June 1946. He served as Colonel in the Judge Advocate General's Corps, and as Staff Judge Advocate of the 88th Division and the X Corps. During the war, he participated in the New Guinea Campaign, the invasion of Leyte, the Mindoro and Mindanao Campaigns, served in the Philippine Islands and with the occupying forces in Japan.

Dean Warner was awarded the LEGION OF MERIT and Bronze Star for his distinguished service. Colonel Warner has been an advisor to the Commanding General of the Third Army and chairman of the Military Justice Committee of the American Bar Association.

Harold Warner returned to The University of Tennessee after completing military service and at one time or another has taught just about every subject in the law curriculum. However, his main interest is Real Property and he is today considered an authority in the field of Future Interests. In 1963, he was named Dean of the College of Law.

Dean Warner has served the legal profession in many other ways. For example, he was a past chairman of the Real Property, Probate and Trust Section of the Tennessee Bar Association; he was a member of the McCord Commission to study Tennessee election laws; he has served as a member of the Tennessee Bar Association's Committee on Continuing Legal Education; and he has served as a member of many other committees of the Knoxville and Tennessee Bar Associations. Presently, Colonel Warner is a member of the American Law Institute.

Not only is Dean Warner a leader in the field of legal education, but an active member in the community. Serving as past director of the Knoxville-Knox County Civil Defense and presently as a member of the Optimist Club, a Mason, and a member of the Magnolia Avenue Methodist Church, he is well known in the Knoxville community.

In the future, Dean Warner will maintain an office in the College of Law and although retiring as Dean and Professor of Law, ties to the school will not be completely severed. His knowledge and experience will continually be used in the movement of the College to even greater strides. It seems a thank-you for all the years of service and devotion to his duty is less than enough, for only those who have known Dean Harold C. Warner can fully appreciate his devotion as a leader and individual.
