NATIONAL LAW STUDENT CAMPAIGN TAKES AIM AT LEGAL CRISIS; NADER JOINS INITIATIVE

Date/line: Washington, DC

Angered that low-income Americans cannot afford a lawyer, students from over half the nation's law schools have launched a campaign for pro bono work in law schools that could add millions of hours of legal services to the poor. Students from several schools -- including Harvard, the University of Hawaii, Whittier, Hastings, Georgetown, the University of Michigan, and American University -- announced the formation of a new group called "Law Students for Pro Bono." The goal of the group's campaign is to incorporate a pro bono requirement into the traditional curriculum at each of the nation's 175 accredited law schools. "In the United States, the principle 'equal justice under the law' really means 'equal justice under the law for the few,'" said Sandra Hauser, a third-year law student at Harvard and an organizer of the campaign. "It is time for our legal educators, the leaders of our profession, and the Bush White House to realize that our legal system is not delivering on its promise of justice for all."

Citing a report of the American Bar Association that shows nine out of ten legal needs of the poor go unmet, Law Students for Pro Bono aims to organize student campaigns at every law school in the country with the goal of making pro bono work a required part of legal education by the year 2000. The group has enlisted the National Association for Public Interest Law (NAPIL) to coordinate the effort.

Announcement of the campaign comes on the heels of NAPIL's public interest law conference, which brought together students from over 90 law schools around the country. It also follows a vote in favor of a pro bono requirement by the prestigious student division of the American Bar Association. "It is a fact that 33% of African-Americans in the United States live in poverty," said Juliette Williams, a Georgetown law student and the national president of the Black Law Students Association. "I am taking part in this organizing campaign because it is imperative that more programs be created to increase the amount of legal services available to the underrepresented." "The legal profession is grossly failing to deliver," said consumer advocate Ralph Nader who came out in support of the law students' effort. "Most lawyers are working for polluters and not the environment, for landlords and not tenants, for management and not workers, for the wealthy and not the poor. Under the campaign announced today, law students around the country are working to change that." "Under pro bono programs established at their schools, students will be working on the critical issues of the day and learning how to meet their professional obligations in advancing justice in their society," Nader said.

Organizers say that if each of the nation's 129,000 law students performed 100 hours of pro bono work per year, they would be providing 12.9 million hours of legal services. Given that pro bono cases take an estimated ten hours, it is possible that upwards of one million Americans can have some of their legal needs met if the requirement is adopted by the nation's law schools.

"There is still a critical need for the legal profession as a whole and the government through such programs as the Legal Services Corporation, which has been seriously underfunded by the Reagan and Bush Administrations, to meet their obligation to delivering access to justice to the poor," said Matt Nicely, student body president at American University Law School. A pro bono requirement already has been adopted by Tulane, the University of Pennsylvania, Valparaiso, and Florida State. Several other law schools are currently considering such a program, including Hawaii, Harvard, UCLA, and Stetson in St. Petersburg, Florida.

"In the classroom we learn that the United States more than any other country in the world promises every person a fair shot in court," said Scott Saiki, a student at the University of Hawaii Law School. "On the streets outside we find a tragically different story." "We find people evicted because they cannot afford to go to housing court, we find battered women who do not have the money to hire a lawyer, and we find elderly people who cannot enforce their rights under the law because of lack of money," added Saiki. "These problems must be incorporated into our education so we can start doing something about them now, and so that we will be better equipped to deal with them when we graduate."

For general comments from student organizers, try Steven Donziger (Harvard) at 617/876-4842; Juliette Williams (Georgetown) at 202/583-1281; Matt Nicely (American) at 202/296-1594; Pam Herzig (Michigan) at 313/995-5884; Scott Saiki (Hawaii) at 808/262-4642.

The College of Law has a full-time computer support person. She's Sandy Selvage. Sandy has been trained by UT's Office of Administrative Computing on IBM computers. She will assist GCT computer users with such things as program updates, printer problems, and support questions. She will also maintain the computer lab in the law library. Sandy's office is in the 4th floor computer lab in the law library and her hours are Monday-Friday, 7:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. She wants students to know that, until further notice, passwords are still to be picked up at the circulation desk. ### Moot Court Teams Come Out On Top!

Trial Team Wins Nationals

The University of Tennessee College of Law's 1990 Moot Court Trial Team won the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers' Criminal Trial Competition, November 1-3, in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Team members are Dail R. Cantrell of Clinton, Michael E. Casterline of Lansing, Michigan, Wynne C. Hall of Knoxville, James B. Johnson of Chattanooga, G. Frank Lannom of Lebanon, and Michael D. Randles of Chattanooga. Law Professor Gary Anderson and Carl W. Eshbaugh, a local attorney, coached the team. Prizes included a plaque and a $2000 team scholarship.

The NACDL used the drug conspiracy case of United States v. Hogan for its first annual competition and invited teams from throughout the United States to compete. Other schools competing were: the University of Alabama, Thomas M. Cooley School of Law, Georgetown University, the University of Georgia, the University of Miami, the University of Missouri at Kansas City, the University of New Mexico, Northwestern University, South Texas College of Law, Southern California University, and Texas Southern University. Northwestern was the top-seeded team, but they were defeated by the UT team during a semi-final round.

National Team Wins Regionals

The National Moot Court Team from the University of Tennessee College of Law took first place in the regional National Moot Court Competition in New Orleans last week. D. Lane Matthews of Weddington, NC, Scarlett A. May of Knoxville, and C. Mark Pickrell of Oak Ridge won six consecutive arguments before defeating Alabama in the championship round. Mr. Pickrell was also selected best oralist for the competition. The team is coached by UT law professor John L. Sobieski, Jr.

The team successfully argued both sides of issues concerning the first and fourth amendments. They won a permanent trophy which was donated by host school, Loyola, and a rotating trophy which will be on display at the College of Law. The rotating trophy is named in honor of UT law professor Joseph G. Cook and was donated by the UT College of Law's 1976 National Moot Court Team who took the national title that year. As a result of their success in the regional competition, the Tennessee team will compete for an unprecedented third national championship in New York in

To all organizations, faculty and staff: Don't forget that when you are planning to have a guest speaker in the College of Law building you need to get a parking permit for the speaker's vehicle in order for them to park in Lot 12 near the building. Please see CJ Thurston in the Business Office so she may assist you with arrangements. Also, please plan early.

TAYLOR TRIVIA: Who on the College of Law staff celebrates December 24th as something other than Christmas Eve or a day off from work? Answer to last month's Taylor Trivia: Professor Neil Cohen and musician Bo Diddley were both judges for the 1990 Riverfest Barbeque Contest, a day that will live in pigfamy.

ADJUNCTS ASSIST WITH TEACHING

James L. Gardner

Adjunct Associate Professor of Law
Professor Gardner graduated cum laude from Harvard College, devoted twelve years to the ministry, and then took a law degree at Yale Law School, where he was Director of the Thomas Swan Barristers' Union. After a period in private practice, Professor Gardner accepted the position of Vice President and General Counsel of Inspiration Coal, Inc., in Knoxville. He has extensive practical experience in the fields of securities and general corporate law. He will offer the Corporate Transactions Seminar this spring.

Robert L. Jolley, Jr.

Adjunct Associate Professor of Law
Professor Jolley graduated magna cum laude from Vanderbilt, and took his law degree at the University of Chicago. After four years as Assistant Attorney General and two as Senior Assistant Attorney General for the State of Tennessee, he came to Knoxville and assumed the post of Assistant District Attorney General for this judicial circuit—a position he has held since 1982. He has wide experience in the trial of both civil and criminal cases, including approximately one hundred jury trials. He will teach a section of Trial Practice.

James R. LaFavor

Adjunct Professor of Law
After graduation from Middle Tennessee State University and combat service in Vietnam, Professor LaFavor returned to Tennessee and took his law degree at the College of Law in 1974, where he distinguished himself in moot court. After graduation he taught in the Clinic as a staff attorney and instructor, and served as Deputy Director of the Clinic's Community Office and senior attorney in charge of litigation for the Knoxville Legal Aid Society. He is now in private practice in Knoxville with the firm of Rowland & Rowland. He will teach a section of Trial Practice in the Spring.

The Honorable Robert P. Murrian,

Adjunct Associate Professor of Law
Judge Murrian is the United States Magistrate for the Eastern District of Tennessee in Knoxville. He graduated first in his class from the College of Law in 1974. He served for two years as law clerk to Judge Robert P. Taylor, United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Tennessee, and then entered private practice in Knoxville. He was appointed to the bench in 1978. He will offer Pre-Trial Litigation at the law school this spring.

Donald Paine

Adjunct Professor of Law
Professor Paine is a partner in Paine, Swiney and Tarwater in Knoxville. He holds three degrees from the University of Tennessee, the last a J.D. received in 1963. He was Editor-in-Chief of the Tennessee Law Review. After serving in the Judge Advocate General's Corps, he joined the U.T. law faculty, where he taught from 1966 through 1975. Professor Paine is co-author of Tennessee Law of Evidence (2d ed.) and one of the principal architects of the new Tennessee Evidence Code. He lectures widely on the law of Evidence and related subjects. He will teach Remedies in the spring.

Sarah Y. Sheppard

Adjunct Associate Professor of Law
Professor Sheppard graduated from the College of Law in 1979. She was a member of the Tennessee Law Review and the author of a published casenote on Tennessee domestic relations law. She is now a partner in the Knoxville firm of Susano & Sheppard. Professor Sheppard is co-author of the current edition of Tennessee Law of Evidence and has taught extensively in continuing legal education programs in Tennessee and elsewhere. This spring she will offer a section of Trial Practice.

The Honorable Joseph M. Tipton

Adjunct Professor of Law
Judge Tipton is a former Knoxville trial attorney, now a member of the Tennessee Court of Criminal Appeals. He earned his B.A. from the University of Tennessee, and graduated first in his class at the University of Tennessee College of Law. As a private practitioner he taught and lectured frequently on litigation-related subjects. His honors include the past presidency of the Tennessee Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers. He returns to the adjunct faculty this spring to teach Trial Practice.

The Honorable Penny J. White

Adjunct Associate Professor of Law
Judge White graduated from the University of Tennessee College of Law in 1981, having served as Editor-in-Chief of the Tennessee Law Review. She holds an LL.M. from Georgetown University. In 1985 Judge White entered private practice in Johnson City. In the spring of 1988 she argued and won a criminal appeal in the United States Supreme Court. Since August of 1990 she has been Circuit Court Judge for the First Judicial District in upper East Tennessee. She will teach a section of Trial Practice.

Paige Auer Winck

Adjunct Assistant Professor of Law
Professor Winck graduated magna cum laude from Georgetown University Law Center in 1978, and clerked for two years for a United States District Judge in the Southern District of West Virginia. After a year with a private firm in Charleston, Ms. Winck came to Knoxville, where she has served since 1981 as Assistant and Associate U.S. Attorney in the Civil Division of the United States Attorney's Office. She will teach a section of Legal Process II.

ABA Section on Individual Rights and Responsibilities - Activity Update
by
Marian Bloss, Drake Law School

The legal profession has been getting "good press" lately, thanks to an IRR Committee endeavor that has focused considerable positive attention on the American Bar Association. Even the Today Show and 60 Minutes, as well as the New York Times, Washington Post, and Wall Street Journal, have taken notice of the highly successful "Soviet Lawyer Internship Project," sponsored by the IRR Section for the past two years. In April of this year, the first 17 attorneys from the Soviet Union headed home after spending 7 months in work-study internships in 11 states with American law firms, corporations, prosecutors, public defenders, and law schools. Those 8 women and 9 men had been chosen from a pool of 162 initial Soviet applicants. In May, an additional 19 Soviet lawyers, semi-finalists from that applicant pool, were brought to Miami, New York, and Washington, DC, in order to participate in professional gatherings with the Young Lawyers Division of the ABA.

In February of 1991, the section plans to bring at least 30 more Soviet lawyers to the U.S. for internships lasting from 7 to 10 months. This annual program is presently funded by the Soros Foundation, an American-based organization that fosters cooperation between the Soviet Union and the United States. In June this year, the ABA approved sponsoring internships for young attorneys from throughout Central and Eastern Europe, based upon the success of the Soviet project. A grant has been offered by the International Academy of Trial Lawyers Foundation for $50,000 to begin this project, and the Bar Association of Czechoslovakia has already offered to cooperate.

The ABA's Section on Individual Rights and Responsibilities is also active in other areas of concern to law students; rights of women, the disadvantaged and minorities, AIDS education and legal services, nuclear arms control, international human rights, environmental and consumer protection, immigration, criminal justice, the death penalty, the First Amendment, privacy and other crucial "people issues" of our time. If these issues are related to any of the reasons WHY YOU CAME TO LAW SCHOOL IN THE FIRST PLACE, then you owe it to yourself to join this section. As a member, you will receive the section's magazine, Human Rights, three times a year, as well as a newsletter containing timely information regarding the section's ongoing work within the ABA.

Steve Thorpe
Assistant Professor and Head of Public Service in the Law Library

Professor Thorpe earned his B.S. in elementary education in 1974 from the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire; his M.L.S. in 1981 from Florida State University; and his J.D. in 1988 from Walter F. George School of Law, Mercer University, Macon, Georgia. His last position was as a staff attorney for the National Veterans Legal Services Project in Washington, DC. He has also been a reference librarian and judicial clerk. Professor Thorpe enjoys hiking and bicycling and lives in south Knoxville with his wife.

Dawn Bennett
Secretary - Dean's Office

Dawn has been serving as a temporary in Career Services and the Word Processing Center since August, and as of December 3 will be the secretary in the Dean's Office. Dawn is a member of the National Association of Legal Secretaries and completed their legal training course in Houston, Texas, in 1987. In her spare time, she enjoys Hobbes (her crazy cat and travelling companion) and volleyball. Dawn lives in north Knoxville with husband, Keith, who is a lighting designer for Holiday on Ice. She says she's especially looking forward to working with the students.

Never yell "there's the police" during an undercover operation.

Don't make matters worse by orally sparring with the officers.

Don't belatedly discover that the officer you are annoying gave you a speeding ticket the day before.

Melvin Maynard, 42, learned the hard way Friday in City Sessions Court.

It cost him a $25 fine and court cost of about $175.

The incident occurred August 11 about 7:15 p.m. at a fast-food restaurant at Magnolia Avenue and Hemphree Street. Two undercover Knoxville police officers, Doot Stiles and Ron Wilson, were arresting alleged prostitutes near the intersection.

Maynard of East Knoxville pulled up in a truck beside the plainclothes officers, who were sitting in an unmarked car, and announced loudly that the men were officers, Stiles testified.

"We were trying to observe a prostitute and her pimp," Stiles testified. "Wilson asked him nicely not to interfere with our operation. He said, 'There's the police' again. Everybody turned and looked."

Stiles testified he heard Maynard utter something "unintelligible" and then "lunge" for his door. Stiles got out of his car.

When Maynard saw Stiles, who had stopped him the day before for speeding, Maynard "called me by name and started to apologize," Stiles testified.

Maynard testified that he did not know the men were officers.

"I did say they looked like the police," Maynard testified. "We just passed words. He (Wilson) asked me if I wanted to get out and I said, 'Yeah.' I wasn't going to get caught in a fight sitting down."

"If I had known they were police, I never would have said anything."

As Maynard stepped from his truck, Stiles arrested him on a public drunkenness charge. Stiles said he had smelled alcohol.

Police also seized a loaded 12-gauge shotgun, which Maynard said he had bought that day for $27 from a stranger on McCalla Avenue to go bird hunting. Maynard was charged with unlawful possession of a weapon.

Maynard was represented by Bryan Lewis, a third-year law student working at The University of Tennessee Legal Clinic. Lewis was coached throughout the hearing by his professor, Gary Anderson.

Lewis argued the "reasonable doubt" as to whether Maynard was intoxicated had been established. Maynard testified he had consumed one beer.

The prosecutor, Sarah Garner, argued, "These gentlemen are trying to show that the officers arrested this man because he was botching up their investigation ... because of malice."

A somewhat amused judge, Brenda Waggoner, who had sat through a 1 1/2-hour misdemeanor hearing after regular court hours, split her decision. She found Maynard guilty of public intoxication and dismissed the weapon charge.

"This has been a remarkable case. I sure have enjoyed it," she said.
