ALUMNI HEADNOTES

Spring, 1984/The University of Tennessee College of Law/Julia P. Hardin, Editor

Good Morning!

Wake up to a convivial gathering of UT Alumni/ae at the traditional breakfast to be held during the Tennessee Bar Association 1984 Annual Meeting.

Day: Friday, June 29, 1984
Hour: 7:30 a.m.
Place: Sheraton Gatlinburg Hotel
Room: Ballroom 1
We'll see you there!

Knoxville Bar Auxiliary Benefits UT

"Sawbones v. Jawbones" is an inspiring test of medical and legal skills . . . on the basketball court.

On February 2, 1984, the second annual basketball tournament played by Knoxville physicians and attorneys was held at Farragut High School. The event is sponsored by the Knoxville Auxiliary to the Tennessee Bar Association and the Knoxville Academy of Medicine Auxiliary, and part of the proceeds go to the legal auxiliary's scholarship fund at UT College of Law and to a new grant to the college to be used for special speaking programs and seminars.

The Auxiliary also held a "Holiday Dinner Dance" on December 9, 1983 for the benefit of UT.

Directory Phone Phase To Begin

All alumni/ae should have received a request for the essential information required to assure complete data in the new alumni/ae directory tentatively scheduled for release in October of 1984. We sincerely hope that everyone has replied.

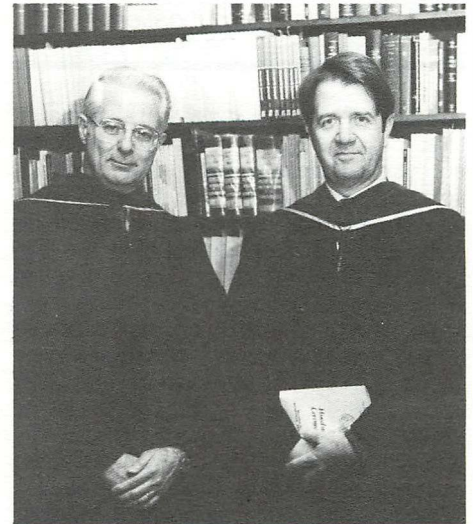

Publication of the directory will be handled by Harris Publishing Company of White Plains, New York. This company is the sole authorized agent for the production and marketing of the directory, and assumes all financial obligations, including the compilation, editing, billing, and distribution of the volume, and will cover its costs through individual book sales to alumni/ae only. This plan will assure the publication of a professionally compiled volume.

Beginning in April, the Harris Publishing Company will conduct telephone follow ups to alumni/ae for verification of the information. At the same time, the telephone representatives will be inviting alumni/ae to order personal copies of the volume.

The telephone call is a follow-up to the two questionnaire card mailings sent to all alumni/ae with verified addresses. If you have not received your questionnaire, please let us know immediately.

Since the cost of the directory is self-liquidating through directory sales, these requests are made on the part of the Harris Company with complete approval. These procedures enable us to make the book available to alumni/ae at no cost to the school and, as a by-product, the Harris Company provides us with completely updated alumni/ae records. The directory will provide a complete listing of all living alumni/ae with current addresses including a biographical sketch on each alumnus/a with name, class year, residence address and phone number, and business or professional information where available.

Alumni/ae who have not returned their questionnaires and are not reached by telephone by the Harris firm will be listed in the directory with the address, if current, provided by alumni/ae records. If you have not received your questionnaire or you do not wish to appear in the directory, please notify us in writing.

Judge Milburn and Dean Penegar don their robes and pause for a photograph before leading the processional across Cumberland Avenue to the Student Center Auditorium where the traditional hooding ceremony was held for December, 1983 graduates.

Starting Off On the Right Foot

Excerpts from the December, 1983 hooding address by the Honorable H. Ted Milburn, U.S. District Judge and UT Alumnus, Class of 1959.

You are about to enter into the practice of a great and noble profession in which you will be trusted by your clients with the care of their lives, liberty, and property with no security other than your name and your word. This is unique in the professions. While you may trust a surgeon with your life, he is not trusted with your liberty or your property.

But in order to be successful, you will perhaps have to work harder and put in longer hours than you would in any other profession, at least for many years to come, if not always. Now if you think you have worked hard in law school, it may be that you have yet to find out what hard work really is. There just is not any way around this due to the nature of an attorney's work, the many emergencies that will arise, and because you will have to keep abreast of the changes in the law as they occur.

Some call the practice of law a "rat race." This may depend upon one's perspective as to what the practice of law really is or one's motivation for entering the practice of law. If your primary motivation for the practice of law is to make money, it will be a "rat race." But if you are motivated by a desire first to be of service and to protect the rights of others, then your work will be for the most part fun, and you will derive a great sense of satisfaction out of doing your work well. But remember this, one must take the bitter with the sweet in any endeavor.

"Be ambitious but patient."

It goes without saying that you should at all times follow the canons of professional ethics, but there is more to consider. Start off on the right foot and establish a reputation as being an attorney whose word can be accepted. Be ambitious but patient. Do not allow the lean years that all must go through to tempt you to take "shortcuts" which you should not take. The October, 1983 issue of the "Tennessee Lawyer" has an article on its first page with the caption in bold type "Tennessee's Disciplinary Crisis". The article was written by William W. "Tripp" Hunt, III, Disciplinary Counsel to the Board of Professional Responsibility of the Supreme Court of Tennessee. The article points out that "in 1978, the case load (both investigative and trial) was 328 cases per year. If cases continue being opened at the same rate in 1983, there will be 776 cases opened in 1983 . . ."

As to accepting representation of a client, some beginning lawyers feel that they must take anything and everything that comes in their door, but you do not. If the matter has no merits, you will do your clients, or your prospective clients, and yourself a service by not accepting the case and explaining in detail why. In fact, with malpractice actions being brought against lawyers now as never before, you may want to put in writing your reasons for not accepting a case and have the prospective client acknowledge receipt of a copy of such explanation. When you accept a given case, post your file or keep a brief memo in the file of all that transpires as the case progresses.

Above all else, people want a lawyer in whom they can believe. Therefore, you should always attempt to inspire confidence in your clients by communicating fully with them and by doing the good job that every client deserves, whether the matter is large or small. As stated earlier, you will derive great satisfaction from a job well done, which should always be your primary goal, and then the financial rewards as a by-product will fall into place. On the other hand, if your primary goal in being a lawyer is to make money, neither your future nor your clients' will be either happy or rewarding.

Over the past 10 years we have seen many changes in the practice of law. The one change I abhor is lawyer advertising. This has resulted in a degrading of our profession and has caused many lawyers to engage in price wars and "assembly line operations" where more often than not, due to the limitations of the lawyer's time for the fee paid, the clients are poorly represented at best. I would submit that the best advertising you can ever have is a satisfied client who believes in you as a trusted friend and counselor and who will sing your praises for years to come.

In dealing with your fellow lawyers, always represent your client, but never take unconscionable advantage. If you do, remember that in the practice of your profession everyone has his or her day and over the next 40 years or so, the probability is that you will reap, on many occasions, what you have sowed. Learn to get along with the other members of the bar and you will soon find out that you can accomplish a great deal just by virtue of the fact that your fellow lawyers trust you and realize that if the shoe were on the other foot, you would assist them on some technicality.

If possible, seek an association with experienced lawyers in whom you have confidence before going out on your own. Your learning process has just begun, and this is truly one of the fascinations of the law and its practice. You have been involved with the theoretical, and now you must learn how to put theory into practice. In my opinion, you should always seek out older and experienced lawyers for advice, especially where questions concerning ethical considerations are involved.

"Above all else, people want a lawyer in whom they can believe."

In the 5th edition of Gibson's Suits in Chancery at Section 1252, there appears the caption, "Some Suggestions for Young Solicitors". The first paragraph states as follows:

Young solicitors must remember that law does not grow naturally in the brain, however large the cranium may be, and however great the vacant spaces therein. A knowledge of the law can only be acquired by constant and thoughtful study; and neither rich raiment, nor fine cigars, nor choice liquors, stimulate the growth of this knowledge. A young lawyer's proper place in business hours, when not elsewhere professionally engaged, is in his office; and his proper work there is either reading up on some legal questions on which he is deficient, or investigating the law or the facts of cases wherein he has been retained. Men who have money are generally men who have sense, and they do not go to loafing places to find a lawyer, they well knowing that good lawyers have no time to loaf, and that loafers are generally lazy and negligent of business — even if they know the law, which they seldom do.

(Emphasis supplied)

As to your duty to the courts, let me first point out that hopefully you will respect all of the judges before whom you appear. If this is not possible, however, you must respect the court. Our system of justice is only as strong and only as effective as the people's belief in and their acceptance of the system. Accordingly, if you do not show respect for our system of justice and work to improve it, then you will be contributing to others' not respecting the system.

"Seek out older and experienced lawyers for advice."

We judges have practiced law and most of us have not forgotten our days as a trial lawyer. If you are really in a bind on a technical matter which does not go to the merits of a case, let me suggest that you not try to hide your problem and skirt around it in some devious manner. If you are not candid and straightforward with the judge or to put it more bluntly, if you make misstatements of fact or of law to a judge, you have marked yourself for the future as one who cannot be trusted.

I wish for each of you many successful years in the practice of law.

Alumni/ae in Atlanta

Bobbie Spears, Class of '61 and Regional Solicitor for the U.S. Department of Justice addressed a January, 1984 gathering of U1 law alumni/ae in Atlanta during the Mid-Year Meeting of the State Bar of Georgia. She emphasized the importance of fundamental research and brief-writing skills for today's lawyers.

Career Planning and Placement Report

The Annual Employment and Salary Report for the Graduating Classes of August and December, 1982 and May, 1983

by Sandra S. O'Rourke

General Statistics

The Annual Employment & Salary Report is based on the knowledge of the employment status of 168 of the 191 graduates (88%). Twenty-four (24) reported "Not Qualified" because those individuals either did not take or did not pass the bar, and one (1) reported "not seeking employment" resulting in 143 qualified for employment. Of the 143, 136 (95%) are known to be employed in permanent or temporary positions. Of the 143, 125 (87%) are known to be employed in permanent positions.

Graduates in General

The graduates who are known to be employed are very much like preceding graduates in that most of them remained in Tennessee and found employment in the private sector of the legal community.

Geographical Distribution

Of the 143 who are permanently or temporarily employed, seventy percent (70%) remained in Tennessee while thirty percent (30%) found employment outside the state. It is interesting to note that approximately half of those who accepted offers from out-of-state employers are from Tennessee. Those graduates who remained in Tennessee preferred to return to their homes or a nearby city. More graduates opted for East Tennessee with Middle Tennessee running a close second. Further, these graduates chose the four major cities throughout the state over small communities two to one.

Areas of Practice

Seventy-five percent (75%) of all graduates prefer private practice with sixty-six percent (66%) of those out-of-state accepting employment in private practice and with seventy-seven percent (77%) of in-state graduates accepting employment in private practice. This figure is higher this year than in the past. Among some of the more interesting non-traditional jobs reported by graduates are working for a radio station that is part of the Hearst conglomerate in Pittsburgh and working for the Seaboard System Railroad in Tampa, Florida.

"Lawyers of the Future" Revived

When he learned that the placement publication, "Lawyers of the Future," was a victim of the law school's financial squeeze over the last couple of years, Richard L. Rose (Class of '74) responded in a spectacular fashion. His response: a gift of $5,000. As a result, this special publication, which offers potential employers a detailed description of our graduates-to-be, will be printed this Spring.

Richard Rose is a partner in the Bellaire, Texas firm of Rose & Ryman. Career Planning and Placement Director Sandra O'Rourke is excited about the prospects for our graduates with the aid of this publication.

Kate Dossett, Senior Recorder

In addition to the long list of services she provides in the area of student records, Kate assists Associate Dean Hoover. She is involved in every student's activities from registration to graduation, and often beyond. She has also been known to offer a much-needed shoulder from time to time.

Freda Ficklin, Sr. Admissions Assistant

The new member of the "Admissions" team, Freda is responsible for recruiting activities in the Fall and for keeping Assistant Dean Wells' travel and appointments schedule straight. She is often found at the keyboard of the computer, filling its memory with the information submitted by law school applicants.

Kim Whittenbarger, Word Processing Specialist

Kim began as a Secretary and within a few months advanced to the crucial position she now holds in the law school's effort to modernize its support services through word processing. In addition to providing quality service in general word processing applications, she produces the final camera-ready copy for the Judicial Newsletter.

Profiles: They Make the Wheels Turn at George C. Taylor Law Center

Karen Phillips, Recorder

Karen is responsible for a myriad of student record functions, including computer input of grades, "Law Week" awards, and instructor evaluations. She also assists Dean Hoover and responds to students' frustrating scheduling problems with patience and charm, often accompanied by a solution.

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a two-part series on the administrative staff of the College of Law. The services these individuals provide to the faculty, students, and alumni/ae are vital to the Law Center's continuing mission of providing quality education in the law.)

Janet Hatcher, Sr. Admissions Assistant

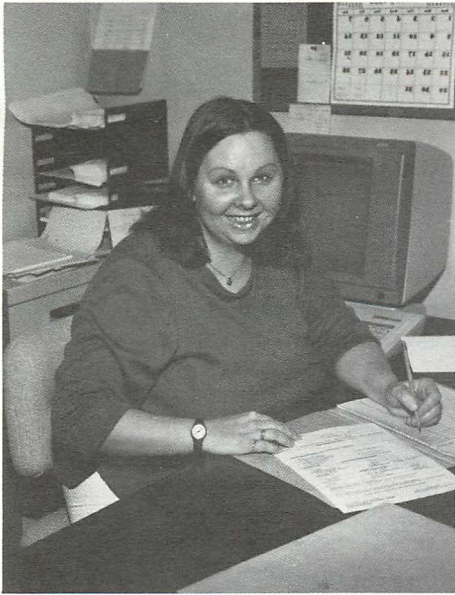

Janet is known as the "coordinator of coordinators" for all of the activities of the Admissions Office. She is probably the first contact most new students have with the law school since "Orientation" is one of her primary functions. If a student needs a scholarship, Janet is the person with all the answers.

Gloria Hill, Training Assistant

The Public Law Institute depends upon Gloria's administrative juggling skills to keep track of all PLI projects. Marketing the Tennessee law publications and coordinating activities for the Continuing Judicial Education programs, not to mention balancing income and expenses, are her primary responsibilities. She also has the additional responsibility of supervising the school's word processing center.

Martha Jumonville, Word Processing Specialist

Martha recently rejoined the law school staff after a few years' absence. She performs magic on one of the two word processors relied upon by the faculty and staff of the College of Law for the production of manuscripts, moot court briefs, repetitive letters, alumni/ae records, etc.

Missy Panter, Publications Manager

The primary responsibility for this hard-working work-study student is making sure the mail-order customers of the Public Law Institute receive the correct Tennessee law publications promptly. Missy also handles invoices and responds to inquiries regarding PLI publications and activities.

Ten Law Firms Donate Painting of Law College to UT

The George C. Taylor Law Center has been immortalized in a collector limited edition print, and thanks to the generosity of ten area law firms, the original will adorn a wall of the UT Law School Art Gallery.

The watercolor of the law school building, from which a limited number of prints have been made, was painted by renowned artist E. Howard Burger.

Ten area firms have combined their resources to purchase the original of the painting for the College of Law: Ambrose, Wilson & Grimm; Arnett, Draper & Hagood; Egerton, McAfee, Armistead & Davis, P.C.; Hodges, Doughty & Carson; Kennerly, Montgomery, Howard & Finley; Kramer, Johnson, Rayson, McVeigh & Leake; McCampbell & Young; Poore, Cox, Baker, Ray & Byrne; Stophel, Caldwell & Heggie; and Taylor & Groover.

ALUMNI/AE NEWS

Class of 1933

WILLIAM C. WILSON was honored at a reception in October of 1983 held in recognition of his 50 years as a practicing attorney. The Knoxville attorney is also President of the W. P. Toms Foundation and has been active in Democratic politics and in numerous church and community organizations over the years.

Class of 1942

WAYNE H. WEAVER recently corresponded with class leader John A. Parker, who shared with us some of Mr. Weaver's interesting past. After graduating from UT law school, he wound up overseas as a flying radio operator in the army air corps. He made 53 crossings of the Himalayan "hump": 26 round-trips and a single "one-way" trip to China.

Following his discharge in 1946, Mr. Weaver earned the LL.B. degree from the University of Alabama. His divided loyalties intensify his interest in the UT-Alabama football rivalry.

Class of 1948

WILLIAM C. SKAGGS, JR. is President-Elect of the Knoxville Bar Association.

JOHN SMARTT has joined the Knoxville firm of Ambrose, Wilson and Grimm. Formerly with Fowler and Rowntree, John was alumni director at UT for 21 years.

Class of 1951

THOMAS GRAY HULL of Greeneville was recently sworn in as U.S. District Court Judge for the northeastern division of the Eastern District of Tennessee.

EUGENE L. JOYCE of Oak Ridge has accepted the appointment as Chairman of the Chancellor's Associates, an advisory group of business and civic leaders working to benefit the UT-Knoxville campus. He is senior partner in the firm of Joyce, Anderson and Meredith.

Class of 1956

LOUIS HOFFERBERT is the new law director in the administration of Knoxville Mayor Kyle Testerman. He held the same position in Testerman's previous administration.

Class of 1957

KYLE TESTERMAN has been elected Mayor of Knoxville for the second time. He was sworn in January 2, 1984, repeating the oath he took over a decade ago.

Class of 1960

CLARENCE E. SHATTUCK, JR. has been appointed Judge of the Hamilton County General Sessions Court.

Class of 1963

FRANCIS A. CAIN was elected to the Board of Governors of the Knoxville Bar Association in December of 1983.

KEMPER B. DURAND became associated with the Memphis firm of Thomason, Hendrix, Harvey, Johnson, Mitchell, Blanchard & Adams last May.

FLETCHER L. HUDSON has announced that the offices of McKnight, Hudson, Lewis &

Class of 1965

ARCHIE R. CARPENTER was re-elected Treasurer of the Knoxville Bar Association in December of 1983.

SHELBURNE FERGUSON, JR. of Kingsport has been named Executive Vice President and Special Counsel of Milligan College, of which he is a 1963 alumnus.

KENNETH D. HENDERSON has announced that the offices of McKnight, Hudson, Lewis & Henderson have moved to 1709 Kirby Parkway, P.O. Box 171375, Memphis, Tennessee, 38187-1375.

RICHARD STAIR, JR. was elected to the Board of Governors of the Knoxville Bar Association in December of 1983.

WILLIAM D. VINES, III has been re-elected as Secretary of the Knoxville Bar Association for 1983-84.

Class of 1967

JAMES K. GIFFIN is now in the Knoxville office of Heiskell, Donelson, Bearman, Adams, Williams & Kirsch, a firm based in Memphis. He was formerly with Fowler and Rowntree.

RANDY TYREE has rejoined his old law firm as a partner. The new name of the Knoxville firm is Morrison, Morrison, Tyree and Dickenson, P.A.

Class of 1968

FREDERICK J. LEWIS has announced that the offices of McKnight, Hudson, Lewis & Henderson have moved to 1709 Kirby Parkway, P.O. Box 171375, Memphis, Tennessee, 38187-1375.

Class of 1969

CHARLES R. EDWARDS, formerly Trial Justice Judge for Sevier County, has re-entered the practice of law in Sevierville at 142a West Main Street.

JON G. ROACH recently joined the firm of Peck, Shaffer & Williams of Cincinnati, Ohio in the firm's Knoxville office which opened in January of 1984. He will be resident partner in the offices located at 2010 Plaza Tower. The firm is engaged in municipal bond law, public authority financing, and general civil practice. Jon was City Attorney for Knoxville for the previous eight years.

Class of 1973

CHARLES W. KITE is now associated with the recently-opened Knoxville office of Heiskell, Donelson, Bearman, Adams, Williams & Kirsch, a firm based in Memphis.

Water Resources Law Study Published

The Public Law Institute and the Tennessee Water Resources Research Center have announced the release of the "Study of Tennessee Water Resources Law: Legal Considerations for Effective Water Management Under Conditions of Shortage" by Professor Jack D. Jones and contributors Vincent E. Sikora and Jane Woodward.

The 296-page publication is actually a final report of a research project funded by the Tennessee Department of Conservation examining the current status of Tennessee's water resources and applicable law, water management alternatives, and developments in other states. The report concludes with recommendations for effective water management in Tennessee and proposed comprehensive legislation and commentary. UT Law Professor Jack Jones was the principal investigator on the project.

The 1983-84 National Moot Court Team:
Scott Rose, Debbie Beller, and Mark Barnett.

UT Moot Court Team Wins Again

A team of three law students from the University of Tennessee has captured the regional championship of the prestigious National Moot Court Competition for the second consecutive year. J. Scott Rose of Morristown, Deborah L. Beller of Johnson City, and Mark P. Barnett of Knoxville were undefeated throughout the competition, the finals of which were held on Saturday, November 12, 1983 in Nashville.

In February, 1984, our team progressed to the third round of the national competition before being eliminated. This is the fourth consecutive year that UT has been represented in the national rounds. The team representing UT won the national championship two years ago. Last year, UT placed second in the nation with both their brief and their oral argument after winning the regional championship.

For the past several years, the UT National Moot Court Team has been advised by law professors Joseph Cook and John Sobieski.

Excellence Breeds Excellence (With a Lot of Help From Our Friends)

Thanks to the generosity of three alumni/ae, the award-winning Moot Court Program at the University of Tennessee College of Law has a bright future. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Fox (Class of '48) have donated $10,000 for the program, and Bill Haltom (Class of '78) and Claudia Swafford Haltom (Class of '80) have contributed $2,000 towards a $10,000 pledge to the endowment fund which supports moot court activities.

Tom Fox and his wife Elizabeth live in Arrington, Tennessee near the city of Franklin where he maintains his law office. He is a longstanding member of the Dean's Advisory Council and has given much of his valuable time and energy to the school's Annual Fund program.

Bill and Claudia Haltom live in Memphis, Tennessee where Bill is associated with the firm of Thomason, Hendrix, Harvey, Johnson, Mitchell, Blanchard & Adams and Claudia is Assistant County Attorney. Both are new members of the Advisory Council.

The income from the endowment will be used to support the travel and printing expenses which every moot court team incurs in participating in regional and national competitions.

Dean Penegar Presents Paper at International Conference

During the week of August 14-20, 1983, Dean Ken Penegar participated in the 11th World Congress on Philosophy of Law and Social Philosophy in Helsinki, Finland. The theme of this year's congress was "Philosophical Foundations of the Legal and Social Sciences." Penegar's paper was entitled "Normative Dissonance in Professional Ideals."

In his presentation, the Dean sketched some differences in viewpoint between the courts and the organized bar as to the limits of confidentiality of client information. Of particular interest, given the theme of the conference, were possible explanations of this divergence, including the pervasiveness of the philosophy of positivism, force of habit, the special influence of the criminal case, and a detachment of the lawyer's role from the social context.

The 11th World Congress on Philosophy of Law and Social Philosophy was attended by philosophers, social scientists, and professors of law from all parts of the world, including third world countries, the USSR and eastern Europe.

(The accompanying photograph shows Dean Penegar talking with Robert Summers, Cornell University Law School, who is Chairperson of the section in which Penegar's paper was presented.)
