Dean Rivkin ...

... and Julie Taylor (Class of '88), and Mark Silvey (Class of '88), as court-appointed lawyers, won a significant Federal Court suit involving the constitutionality of the conditions of confinement in the Knox County Jails. As a result of the action of several Knox County Jail inmates, the Court determined that the conditions of confinement were unconstitutional. Students in the Clinic are now working on the remedial phase of the case.

Marilyn Yarbrough ...

... will speak at Middle Tennessee State on Monday, March 13, during Women's History Month on "Women in Law."

TAYLOR TRIVIA: What were the admission requirements for the College of Law in 1890? Answer to last month's Taylor Trivia: The first law classes at the University of Tennessee were held in various buildings on the Hill. The College then moved into Tennessee Hall on Main Street in 1926 (where a church parking lot is now located). The College of Law did not move into the Cumberland Avenue building until 1950.

STUDENT MESSAGE CENTER

The Student Message Center, located opposite the student phone at the entrance to the Student Lounge on the basement level, is in operation. Use the slot to the right of the individual's name to leave a message. Folders have also been designated for student organizations.
